The Lahaina Smallpox Case. Following is a copy of the official report of this case, which has been forwarded for publication:

LAHAINA, April 28, 1887. His Excellency W. M. Gibson, President

Board of Health: Sir: I have the honor to submit to from the Jennie Walker. Your Excellency the following report concerning the case of smallpox among the Japanese at Lahaina and the quaran tine imposed on account of the same:

On my arrival on the morning of the 12th instant Dr. Kuehn and myself visited the patient at the pest-house. I found him thickly covered with an eruption. There tra yellow C, 45/8@43/4c. were also several sores on his legs and loins-the latter most likely syphilis. On examining the eruption, I found it to be of two distinct kinds-a large majority of it being superficial. On opening the same Ifound they contained a watery fluid, decidedly not smallpox.

There were about 50 other pustules, half of which seemed to have been forced towards maturity, most likely by the use smallpox cases. The other half were well developed pustules having a deep base under the skin, and containing a thick pus, entirely different to those first mentioned. The patient's mouth gave addi- this. He could clean the lamp chimneys tional proof of the nature of the disease. On the skin between the pustules I noticed one or two marks which suggested the idea of previous smallpox, As Mr. Seya, the interpreter, and the Japanese doctor were present, I asked the patient if he had had smallpox before. He stated that he had it when young. In spite of the above information, I could come to no other conclusion than that it was a case of smallpox of mild form, and after watching the case for a day or two, I was satisfied that the doctors 1 o'clock, sir. Caveley (who has lost him-had decided aright. Bell Telephone 348. P. O. Box 415.* Two or three days after my arrival the eruption first mentioned commenced to dry up and disappear, and, by the 18th instant was entirely gone, leaving the smallpox pustules well defined and progressing in the ordinary manner. Dr. Kuehn and myself made a thorough inspection of the Japs in quarantine yesterday, and with the aid of an interpreter obtained the following facts regarding their protection from smallpox by previous smallpox or vaccination: Out of 55 Japs living in the house in quarantine, 42 had smallpox before. About half this number show strong marks of the disease, one quarter show slight marks, and we have taken the word of the remaining one quarter that they have had it, although it has left no mark. Eleven of the Japs who have not had smallpox show good marks of having been successfully vaccinated in Japan; and two only of them show neither smallpox or vaccination. From careful enquiries I find that the patient was taken with the fever April 1st, the eruption broke out on the 4th inst., and the man was removed to the pest house on the morning of the 8th. The house was thoroughly disinfected and fumigated, and, with the 54 Japs, was placed under strict quarantine. There was also a quarantine placed on the town by order of Dr. Kuehn, but this was afterwards raised by orders from other quarters. On my arrival here, after having seen the patient, I decided to re-quarantine the town, also Olowalu, and, as there are no signs of any more cases, I have raised the quarantine this morning. I have had the Japs' quarters again disinfected, and the quarters of other laborers have been cleaned and disinfected by W. Y. Horner at my request, and every precaution taken to put the place in as good sanitary condition as

Since the quarantine was imposed, 229 persons have been vaccinated. I am sir, your obedient servant.

IMPLANTING TEETH.

DESCRIPTION OF A REMARKABLE OPERATION IN DENTAL SURGERY.

A Doctor who Has Great Faith in His Methods of Implantation-Some of the Mistakes which Experimenters Have

A few months ago we gave a report of what Dr. William J. Younger, San Francisco, Cal., had been doing in the way of implanting teeth into artificial sockets. At that time he considered it essential to preserve the vitality of the pericemental membrane by keeping the tooth in water of a temperature of about 120° F., or to implant the tooth, just after extraction, in the comb of a cock.

Since then he has discovered that the pericemental membrane will retain its vitality for 13 months, and how much longer has not been determined, without any care, being carried in the packet, left on the dressing case, etc. The report of this case, one of several, is given in a pamphlet of 14 pages, entitled "Implantation of Teeth and Pericemental Life," being a report made to the California State Dental association, July 21, 1886. The doctor has great faith in the operation, has succeded beyond his "most sanguine expectations," and believes "that in a short while it will become as firmly established in professional practice

THE DOCTOR'S PRACTICE. The doctor's practice is to lay the extracted teeth uside in a clean, cool, dry place, for future use. He forms the socket with graded trephines, finishing the walls with burs of various shapes.

Previous to inserting the tooth in the socket he soaks it for half an hour in water containing bi-chloride of mercury one in a thousand, temperature 110° to 120° F.: during the operation of forming the socket he washes it out with cold water, containing the same percentage of bi-cloride mercury, trying the tooth from time to time, always returning the tooth to its bath. He forces the tooth finally to place with an instrument such as is used to force a pivot tooth into position using no ligatures to retain the tooth unless absolutely necessary. In answering the objections to this operation by those who have met with failures in replantation and transplantation, he says:

"Now if they would but consider the conditions and circumstances under which these different operations are undertaken, they would readily see that the premises upon which they ground their assumption are unsound and deceitful. For instance, in replantation, as this operation is usually perfomed, the parts, that is, the perice-mental membrane, the apex of the root and the alveoler process immediately surrounding these, are highly inflamed. in a state of disease, with pus either already formed or forming at the end of the root, and the operation is undertaken with the view of relieving or aborting an alveolar abscess. A portion of the diseased apex is then cut off, and the tooth is forced back into the cavity. Here we have a diseased root thrust back into a diseased socket. The disease not removed, its conditions are simply modified; and while the congestion may subside, and the tooth becomes comparatively comfortable, the FIRST DAY, JUNE 10, 1887. the congestion may subside, and the tooth disentegration of the root substance-already begun—is likely to continue, and in the course of time the entire root becomes destroyed, or what is called absorbed; and the crown drops off. So much for replantation.

ANOTHER MISTAKE.

"Again, in transplantation there is a healthy tooth, but it is usually made to take the place of a miserable, old, diseased root that has been growing and festering in a diseased socket for years, to the discomfort of its unfortunate possessor. The diseased root is pulled out, but is the disease in the surrounding alveolus extracted with it? On the contrary, enough is usually left in the tissue to make war upon the new occupant, and either cause its expulsion or eat away its substance. You must remember that while the old root remained there was sufficient vent through its decayed or broken structure to permit the gases of decomposition and the pus to escape, and thus prevent active trouble. But when the new tooth is put in the vent is entirely occluded, and if there be sufficient disease in the alveolus, the retained gases and pus effect the exclusion or the painful elongation of the intruder. If not enough disease is left to do this, then the slow process of erosion is apt to ensue and the root becomes in time absorbed. "Now, in implantation we have a healthy root in a healthy socket, and, therefore, the factors that tend to the destruction of the root in replantation and transplantation are not present, and WRunning Race; 1/2 mile dash; open to all. therefore, not operative in implantation. "As to the seeming violence to the bony structure of the jaw, I will state that there | b Running Race; 2 mile dash; open to all. is no substance in the human body that seems so tolerant of abuse as this same alveolar process. And my experience is that union takes place more readily and kindly, and the teeth become much

The Days A Snail's Extra Eye. A German professor spent twenty years n studying the habits and characteristics of a certain snail and learned this interesting fact concerning it. On the Pacific coast of Amercia, where it is found in great abundance, it is preyed upon by a certain fish which abounds in the Pacific ocean. As an aid in escaping from its formidable enemy it has been provided with an eye on the back of its head. The same snail is found on the Atlantic coast exactly like its far western brother in every particular except that it has no posterior eye. And the reason for this is that there is no corresponding fish to prey upon it in the Atlantic ocean.-Boston Budget,
